The “HyperMotion” data is processed using “Core” AI, which understands its own system and develops a more accurate contextual interpretation of what is required and the best way to achieve it. As a result, AI moves and uses the ball quicker, makes more intelligent touches, attacks the ball better and defends better. This also impacts individual players on both sides of the pitch: Passengers, dribblers and runners learn how to predict and exploit their teammates movements when they are not in possession. “FIFA Ultimate Team” players will also notice that their AI teammates behave more intelligently when they face off against human teams and human players in high-intensity matches. They will play more naturally and will engage in more high-intensity actions than in previous Ultimate Team modes. Alongside the game’s new AI, FIFA 22 introduces “Team Tackles” to the game, which have been developed to replicate a real football match. Players (with licensed 2018 FIFA World Cup jerseys) will realistically engage in contact with each other when they contest the ball. Players will realistically move in different directions in order to win the ball back. If a player is tackled, they will realistically fall over as if they were in an actual match. If a player takes a shot at the goal, they will realistically get their shot away. In addition, the “Team Tackles” mechanic will also impact when players initiate off-ball actions during team interactions. For example, players will engage in more individual duels with other players they want to challenge (rather than just waiting for other players to challenge them). Furthermore, players running off the ball will initiate more realistic sprints to re-adjust to play the ball or attack. For players pressing the ball up the pitch, they will initiate more realistic runs into space when faced with a short passing option. “FIFA 22’s” new AI, team tackles and new sprint mechanics are all designed to highlight their importance in an actual football match. “This takes the game’s AI to a new level, making them much smarter, more aware and more responsive to the challenges of the modern football environment,” commented Andrew Okoli, Executive Producer at EA SPORTS FIFA. “Our new AI also brings intelligent team movement to life on the pitch and will make more accurate passes, tackles, and creative movements. Not only will this make all
